Dear Daddy,Sitting here typing this I'm already getting a knot in my throat. I still wake up in the morning and dread facing the day knowing I can't talk to you. I'm trying so hard to make you proud of me. If I could just sit on your lap, enveloped in you cozy, safe frame I know I'd be ok. Thinking about how that will never happen again hurts me so badly tears aren't even enough. I feel so lost, as if my path in this life has disappeared. I don't know where I'm going, I don't know what the hell I'm doing, I don't even know who the hell I am anymore. I'm so bitter, and so angry. I don't let it showbut I may just explode. Why did you leave me? Why did you have to go? I still have so many questions to ask you, so many faces to make at you, so many arguments to have with you.... I love you.Love,Your Little Girl

Dad, I have had the honor of being your daughter for the past 31 years. Although we have spent many nights and phone conversations dicussing life and death, nothing prepared me for the pain I would feel from this loss. A few weeks ago you called me and told me your were proud of me and how I lived life my own way. I thank you for the unconditional love that you gave and continue to give. It has only been a week and three times I have asked you for something. Even though we now reside in different realms you were still able to deliver. You were right dad, you were right. love monk

Dad,I have been waiting for the words to come...I have been waiting to know exactly what to write to you, what to say to you...and I realized that the words will never be exactly right. I have been with you the longest, I have so, so, so many memories with you. Just today, I quoted one of the most memorable conversations of my lifetime. It was a conversation between you and I. I won't share all the details here, because it is private, just as you were...just as I am. I will always carry a piece of you with me. I will always know that you are with me. In the air, in the trees, the owl, and the birds I see, I will see your smiling face. I will see you every day that I look in the mirror. You have left me, but I am not alone. I know that you will be with me forever.I love you dad.Love, Erica

My dearest Daddy,I am having the hardest time without you. I know you can see that I'm struggling. You didn't raise a weakling that's for sure. I'm proud that I get to share you with my sisters and so many other hearts that you've touched. Your mind, your soul, and your heart must've been too great for this world to contain. That's the only way I've been able to wrap my head around this tragedy. You were trapped in this life, limited. But now you're free to think, to feel, and to be just as you have always been seen by others: The strongest man anyone has ever met. Fly free Daddy, and wait for me to join you one day. "I am a sacred owlThe night is my friendBetween the sky and earth Is where I amListen to my sacred ways"I love you to the ends of the earth, up to the heavens, and to the deepest place in my heart.

I knew Bob for most of his life, I'm terribly sorry that I can't make his service, but I'm caring for my 81 yr old mother, who's having a rough time of it. I loved Bob like a brother, he was a true friend the type that comes far too infrequently. In as much as fate would dictate, sometimes people make incorrect choices, not being perfect is what the human experience is ultimately about. Bob could be counted on in any circumstance to render assistance, he was a loyal and much loved friend. I will miss him tremendously for the rest of my life. I was privileged to know this man. He told me in a dream last night not to attend his memorial, only to safeguard me and my family, Bob and I both believed in the power of the human mind and all its foibles, Bob could speak on many subjects and we often did. I can't find words with the power to express the feelings I had for him, he saved my life at one time and I've always been ever grateful. The odd thing about death is that it only truly hurts those who were the closest to you, in that respect the pain I feel now will eventually subside and I will be able to remember him as he would've wanted, you're finally free now Bob and as we discussed on many occasions I hope you're waiting for me when my time comes, the universe is your highway and I'm sure you'll have many trails discovered to show me when I get to you. All the things we couldn't know before have evaporated and the spectrum of man's life is now clear to you. Knowledge we so desperately sought is at your command and I'm sure you'll take full advantage of the table laid out before you. I guess it's been a little over 3 yrs since we buried Dodsworth and we discussed the frail, defenseless reality called life and nausea. I wish I could see the sights you're seeing with you, but that's only my own selfish desire, I know from what you told me last night you're in a wonderful place the weak, blunted human mind can only imagine, it figures that you would beat me to it! That's testament to the way you carried yourself with dignity and humility with such ease and grace, although we could probably still work on the grace aspect! Even at very low moments in your life you always had me as a friend and your passing doesn't change a thing in that regard. I guess I will think of you everyday for the rest of my life like I do Ronnie (Dodsworth) and remember the crazy things we did together in our time together. As I often contended, circumstance is not always random, but I'm sure you know that now. The wisdom of all time is know at your fingertips and I'm going to endeavor to find as much as I possibly can in my remaining time. Just seeing your picture is incredibly painful, but I can hear you telling me that it's ok and to keep a steady course. This sometimes miserable life is a test of the spirit of the individual, and I can honestly say you passed the test with flying colors (NPI)! Reach for me and I'll be there, just like it always was. I hear your robbish laughter like it was when you were here and will never forget. The tears streaming down my face only serve to remind me how much alike we were, who could forget the times we had? Not I. Impossible to forget, but I WILL chronicle each and every one at the appropriate time. July 9 2012 will be a melancholy day for me from now on. Like it or not (as you told me once) we are stuck here in this life until we earn better. I already know how right you were, and using this insight I will strive to live a better life. I couldn't have had a better friend.
