In reading the recollections his friends have shared, the warmth and emotion they contain is not at all surprising to me. He was a kind, knowledgeable and generous man who selflessly and quietly provided a helping hand to others in need. He was funny and fun to be with, and he knew and would share the many secrets that only a "local" outdoors-man could know. I was another of his friends with whom he shared some of his knowledge and for that, for his friendship, and for the many times he asked "Are ya burnin em?", he'll be within my cherished memories. I'll see you in a while, Freddie. Save a good rock for me to fish from. Hal Marriott

We met Fred about 30 years ago when he was looking for mullet at Cape Henlopen. We were just learning how to cast a net and Fred must have felt sorry for us when he realized we didn't have a clue about how to cast a net. So Fred being Fred gave us lessons on casting. Whenever we saw him casting for mullet he would be really kind and dump some of his mullet in our bucket. That was Fred - a good man. Over the years we would see him in September and October at the point and we would just cast our nets and chat a while. We had many interesting conversations. Fred was a good man - one of the nicest men we ever met - and we will surely miss him. We always looked forward to seeing him in our favorite mullet spots. Some day we will meet again and we hope they have mullet in heaven. We will keep him in our prayers. Jim and Wanda Lewes, DE
