Don Tenne posted:

Oh, no! I'm so sorry to hear this. I was the top Financial Planner for Metlife for five years and worked exclusively with Bob as my Casewriter. I respected Bob's knowledge and his ability to speak English in the financial plans he wrote for me and his common sense. We developed a friendship and I stayed in touch with him after both our retirements from Met. I knew he was having some health challenges but he and I were both optimistic. He was a generally optimistic and positive guy. I know he loved his family very much, and I will miss him. He led a life of significance and made a big positive difference to hundreds or even thousands of planners and their clients. God rest your soul, Bob. Don Tenne
