“ Thank you to everyone who has taken the time to send condolences / share memories of my Uncle.

I miss him tremendously -- it's taken me 3 months to get up the courage to read these pages. I miss the laughter & his calming effect on the family. His laugh, over all others in our family would ring through our family gatherings.

He was a devoted son and brother -- I believe a heavy weight must have fallen on him when my grandfather died but he never showed it. He never forgot to call + send flowers on birthdays / holidays -- little things like that, were huge and so very much appreciated. Whenever my mom or her 2 sisters were having trouble dealing w/ my grandmother's stubbornness, a phone call from him saying "Now Mother ..." would be the fix.

He was the most wonderful Uncle & I treasure the day he taught me ballroom dancing -- same day as the day he introduced me to guacamole -- as well as my visit w/ my mom to see him & Ed in 2004.

My sister & I still remember the panic & anxiety we felt on Sep 11, 2001. We were unable to reach him for hours. The thought that we could have lost him that day made me appreciate all the days he was with us since then.

I love you Uncle Neal.

Until we meet again in the next life -- rest in peace.

“ My step-father was an original.

On the one hand, so private, modest, analytical, ethically driven, eager to examine logic or function throughout history, and on the other, just as eager to laugh loudly, at one time dance swiftly, to indulge in a spectacular meal, so full of opinion, ardent admirer and defender of opera, dance and art - so hungry to dare to allow himself to have an experience. So wanting to let go, or as Zelda Fichandler once said to a friend, "Sometimes you just need to lean back and let someone wash your hair for you." These beloved qualities complemented and pulled at each other in the most fascinating of ways, forming who dear Neal Tash as I saw him was, all the more intricately when you stop and consider the nuanced expanse of his 79 years. My life has been immensely enriched by knowing Neal throughout my adult life: the talks we've shared privately, knowing looks and smirks across tables, debates about things some might coin as generational differences, all the visits in various cities (often when he and my Dad schlepped to see me work, with limited social time to offer), and of course, most especially, in how he and my Dad have loved each other through thick and thin for 26 years. Who knew a July 4th party could be so Freeing?

I am, of course, relieved that he is at peace. But I already miss him so much and am so grateful to have been lucky enough to witness his humility, dignity, commitment and love between 'the Dads' in these last weeks as well as in the years preceding it. I hope wherever he is that Callas is singing 'O Patria Mia' welcoming him. I will be looking for signs of him everywhere for a long time. Rest in Peace, sweet Neal. Keep a gentle eye on your sisters, Bryan, and my Dad.

“ So deeply saddened to hear of Neal's passing. We were stationed together at Ramstein AB Germany. Neal shared his infectious love of opera with me which abides to this day. There are special people in life and I am honored that Neal blessed my life with so many extraordinary memories.

“ I met Neal when he was already retired and had the opportunity to share three trips with him.
I will always remember his sharp sense of humor and our after dinner discussions while enjoying a Negroni or Malbec wine – in the same evening we use to talk about the last Bayreuth Opera House Season or if “La Lolo” was older than “La Loren”.

“ I first met Neal while working in Crystal City, VA and living in Alexandria, VA back in 1993. We connected immediately through our efforts/discussions pertaining to security related issues. He was one of the most knowledgeable/concerned proponents I knew. He was also fun to chat with on less global topics. I am so glad to have known him and to have called him a true friend. You will be sorely missed! RIP, my dear friend. - Chris Brown

“ As a military family, Neal's parents were instrumental in my parent's early days in the Air Force. Our families were very close. I was named after his mother as I was born on her birthday. The last memory I have of Neal is when he came to support my mother as my father was dying. He was like an angel that swooped in, helped her make difficult decisions with such grace. I will never forget how his presence gave us such peace. Rest In Peace, true leader. Ursula

“ Dear Ed. Gary and I send our warmest wishes to you.

Each time we saw you and Neal together provided enduring memories of your long and loving relationship. And our several-hour lunch in Cape May was unforgettable!

I never realized what a remarkable career Neal had in the military. Another reason for us all to be proud and grateful to him for his extraordinary service.

“ Oh Ed, I am so very sorry. Neal was the very best. I'll never forget the day when he bought the Mercedes and came to the library to pick me up for a spin. Sending love and hugs.

“ Ed,

Neal was such a good friend. He and I worked together for many years on library committees. He was so much fun, had a great sense of humor, and always – always – added so much to committee discussions. He had an interesting life and told wonderful stories of his overseas adventures. I pestered him relentlessly about going dancing together just to see if I could keep up with this competitive ballroom dancer. What fun that would have been! And what an opera buff! I enjoyed sitting with the two of you, Ed, during the last two seasons of the Met Live in HD. I learned a lot. Thanks for including me.

I've missed Neal since he became ill some time ago. And now I'm so, so sad.

My condolences to you, Ed, and to Neal's immediate and extended families.

“ Dear Ed,

This is heartbreaking news. I loved and valued Neal for all he did for the library, for his friendship during all my years working at the library, For his advice, sense of humor and for his kindness. My fondest memories are when he had me teach him basic knitting stitches so he could teach his granddaughter. Then there were those fun martinis you and he would offer when we would meet at the local gathering spot.

I am so glad I did get to see him last December.

I share your grief and send my sincere sympathy to you and all of Neal's family and friends.

“ So sad. Neal was unique, an "officer and a gentleman". He was really a nice guy and it was always a pleasure to run into him and share thoughts. Neal and I both served at DIA, albeit at different times and places.

He left his mark and will be missed.

I miss so called run ins with Neal. We could talk about a variety of subjects, not just books but also music and operas.

Our condolences to his family and all his friends.

He now rests in peace, no more pain, just peace.
